About This Site

All newly admitted first-year students will take Rutgers University's placement tests. Transfer students entering Rutgers without an equivalent English writing course or math course will also be required to take placement tests. The placement tests are designed to provide information about students' individual skills in the English language and in mathematics. The test results will be used to place students in the courses and sections appropriate to their level of preparation. In some cases, those may be noncredit, developmental courses. Also, testing in a foreign language studied in high school is compulsory for students who will attend the School of Arts of Sciences in New Brunswick and for certain students who will attend colleges in Camden.

Each campus (Camden, Newark, and New Brunswick) will notify their students where the tests will be administered and when they are to take them. Each college schedules the date and time for administering the tests to its students. Test scores will be reported to respective colleges, and the colleges determine the procedures for communicating information about the test results to its students.
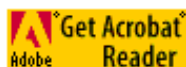

If a student has a learning or physical disability that would prevent him or her from taking the tests under standard conditions, contact your college's coordinator for the concerns of students with disabilities to request special accommodations. You can find these names by going to: http://disabilityservices.rutgers.edu
